About Goa: Goa is India's smallest state. It is located on the west coast of India in the region known as Konkan. Goa was ruled by the Portuguese for 450 years till it was liberated from the Portuguese to form a part of India on 19 December 1961. Goa is one of India's richest states with a GDP per capita of one and a half times that of the country. Tourism is Goa's primary industry followed by the fishing and agriculture. Rice is the main agricultural crop followed by cashew and coconut. Panaji is Goa's administrative capital and the hub of business/industry. Panaji lies on the left side of the river Mandovi overlooking Goa's legislative capital Porvorim. Konkani is Goa's primary spoken language, English and Marathi are the other languages used for official and educational purposes. Hindi, India's national language is also spoken as a second or third language. Rice and fish curry is the staple diet of the people of Goa. Coconut is widely used in the preparation of many dishes along with chilly, spices and vinegar. Some of Goa's most sought after dishes are prawn curry and rice, crab xexec, pork vindaloo, sorpotel, sannas and last but not the least the best dessert of the state bebinca.
